As a nonprofit, one of your most valued resources is your donor database. You carefully track each donor, making sure that they are cultivated on a timely basis. But how do you identify potential donors? Yes, you gather contact information from your website, or from Facebook, or from trade shows, but even then, what do you really know about the people you are considering potential donors? Do they give to other like-minded organizations? Do they give to organizations at all? While there are various wealth screening tools available, they are designed to work with existing prospects.

Donor Search is different, providing subscribers access to more than 20 databases including DonorSearch's Annual Reports Philanthropy Database, with over 110 million records, with more than 600,000-700,000 records added every week. The Philanthropy Database is updated weekly, so you'll always have access to the latest records. Also included in your subscription is access to the Annual Reports Charitable Database, FEC political Giving Database, which tracks every political contribution over $200,
