The Trial Balance CS system from Thomson Reuters (formerly Thomson Tax & Accounting) provides full integration with the tax, write-up and document management components of the CS Professional Suite. It can also be used as a stand-alone program or remotely accessed using the Virtual Office CS system. Trial Balance CS offers a variety of customizable financial statement formats, with several features designed to enhance workflow and save time. The program costs $600 for a non-network license with annual upgrades priced at $155.

EASE OF USE — 4.5 Stars

Thomson Reuters provides generally consistent interfaces across all of the programs in the CS Professional Suite, making initial usage and familiarity with all programs fairly easy. Trial Balance CS opens within a crisply designed window that provides customizable panels for Tasks, Recent Clients, Firm Information, Data Locations, Status Summary, Notices and Payroll information. Each of these provides further options for working within clients, accessing support, finding online resources and other functions. A selection of icons and menus across the top of the screen also provide access to key features.

The main client selection screen provides basic sorting by client ID or name and searching by ID. Within client data folders, the program displays reports and documents, such as transmittal letters, in a vertical panel on the left, which makes moving between functions intuitive. Additionally, Trial Balance CS provides a split-screen view of trial balance alongside record journal entries, which speeds the process. Data-entry screens are easy to use, with smart selection lists that speed entry.
