

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

Okay, just a little humor as professionals start to really dig into the tax season.

Despite the ongoing movement by tax and accounting practices toward paperless processes as a part of modern workflow, print some things, of course, is still occasionally necessary. So, let's try a couple of new terms when referring to the occasional paper functions that professionals still must deal with.

Instead of "Printing," the new term is "Exporting to Tactile Format."

Instead of "Scanning," how about "Importing from Tactile Format."

Yes, I'm kidding.

And don't expect to see software companies rushing to change their systems to incorporate the new terms. But in the jargon-filled world of technology, sometimes it's good to have a little fun with that jargon.

Visit www.CPATechViews.com to read and comment on other insights from the Intersection of Technology and Public Accounting.

Technology

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us