“We are proud to join forces with a firm of similar size, scope, culture and service philosophy,” Topp said. “Eide Bailly and Wipfli are both committed to offering our clients top-quality service and customized solutions to help them thrive, and to providing our staff with a positive culture and exciting career opportunities.”

Dreher, who will serve as the Managing Partner/CEO of the merged firm, said, “We have forged mutual respect and a strong relationship with Eide Bailly over the years, and feel this is an outstanding opportunity to combine our collective talents and strengths to enhance the value we bring to our clients, associates and the communities we serve.”

The new firm will have a staff of 2,327 associates, including the firm’s 301 partners. Among the combined firm’s more noteworthy strengths, its national wealth management practice will rank as one of the largest in the accounting profession with nearly $3 billion in assets under management.
