Tax Executives Institute, international association of corporate tax professionals, and the Tax & Accounting business of Thomson Reuters have renewed their partnership, making Thomson Reuters an exclusive affinity partner for tax information and workflow solutions.

Thomson Reuters' dedication to providing the profession with the tools and research tax and accounting professionals played a major part in the extension of the affinity relationship, said David Penney, President, TEI International.

“Thomson Reuters has long demonstrated its commitment to providing tax executives with the timely, accurate, authoritative, and cost-effective research, workflow tools, compliance and CPE solutions that are essential to TEI members in serving their companies,” said Penney. “The company’s commitment to addressing the corporate market’s evolving needs remains second to none. In the digital arena, in particular, Thomson Reuters has established itself as an industry leader with brands like Checkpoint and ONESOURCE.”

Discounts on selected tax information products, online CPE and professional education courses, as well as numerous other benefits are available to TEI members as a result of the affinity agreement. Members also have the opportunity to participate in advisory boards, providing their feedback on future product development. In the future, TEI and Thomson Reuters will host a series of webcasts for TEI members that will feature experts from the profession and focus on topics and issues of concern to TEI members.

“We are extremely pleased and honored to continue as TEI’s exclusive affinity
