

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

Sep. 27, 2012

SMALL BUSINESS OWNERS WORKING MORE WITH LESS THIS SUMMER

A new study from Manta, the largest online community dedicated entirely to small business, revealed insights from more than 1,200 small business owners about seasonal and mobile trends.

NO SUMMER VACATION FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

58% say they're working more this year than last

26% say they're working the same amount

16% say they're working less

70% say they do not plan to hire any new employees this summer

30% say they do

71% say they access emails or documents from mobile devices while on vacation

29% say no they don't say they enjoy vacation more because of their mobile devices

60% say they enjoy it less

40%

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

In this issue, we've focused many of our articles and columns on how the cloud, aka web-based technologies, are helping to change the way accounting firms do business. The benefits have reached firms of all sizes, helping streamline internal workflow processes, as well as their client relationships.

Many small businesses are also reaping the same rewards, since mobile tools and web-based business management, sales tools and accounting systems help business owners stay on top of processes and day-to-day operations, regardless of where they are.

Although some professionals may look at this "always plugged in" lifestyle as being a drawback, a recent report showed that most small business owners actually appreciate the freedom it gives them, whether they're on the road for business, to attend their children's activities or just to spend time with the family.

In the past, many small business owners have reported that regardless of financial capability, they were unable to take vacations as often as desired, or to fully enjoy their vacations when they did take one. After all, there are no paid vacation days for the owners of small businesses, and for the smallest, taking a day or more off often means that the lights, and revenue, go dark during that time.

Accountants in small practices likely can empathize with this premise, since your

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us was conducted in late spring as part of the Manta SMB Wellness Index, showed that a little less than half of small business owners planned to take a vacation over this past summer.

While the above mentioned control issues, business pressures and the current economy certainly all played varying roles in their decisions, the report did not summarize the types of businesses surveyed. This could also affect a decision on a summer vacation, since those with peak sales or volume seasons during the middle of the year also would be unlikely to schedule a vacation during their busy season. That would be like asking a tax professional if they planned on taking a week off in early April.

Another reason for less than half of those surveyed planning a vacation is that 60 percent of the respondents expected to be working more this year overall than they did last year.

However, for those who said they were planning on taking a vacation, the cloud and mobile technologies played a role in the decision. This is because they say that these technologies allow them to stay in contact with their business and clients while they are away.

While only a few short years ago taking work on vacation might have sounded depressing to some professionals, the new reality is that small business' workflow becomes a logjam, and many don't envy the thought of coming back to a backlog of tasks and issues. So these technologies are easing their stress and 60 percent of those planning a vacation said that mobile access would actually help them enjoy their vacation more.

Now that the summer is pretty much in the rear view mirror and you and other tax

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

Boxout

Small Businesses & Mobile Tech

71% access emails or documents while on vacation

60% say they enjoy vacation more because of mobile devices

68% use mobile devices while also at their computers

24% use their mobile device for business every day

Source: Manta SMB Wellness Index

Firm Management • Small Business

CPA Practice Advisor is registered with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) as a sponsor of continuing professional education on the National Registry of CPE Sponsors.

© 2024 Firmworks, LLC. All rights reserved

