Fast Forward Academy has added CPA exam review tools to the study planner it released last month, which was initially for tax preparers and enrolled agents taking tax courses in preparation for the RTRP or EA IRS exams.

Accounting professionals can now expect to see plans added to the following courses: Auditing and Attestation (AUD), Business Environment and Concepts (BEC), Financial Account and Reporting (FAR) and Regulation (REG). Passing the CPA exam requires attacking one section at a time, so the calendar will allow accounting professionals to plan for one test now and create additional plans later depending on the order and target exam dates the student chooses.

The study planner itself has interactive features that students studying for sections of the CPA exam can manipulate to customize their specific study schedule. Accounting students can use the calendar as part of their CPA exam review to set up start and end dates, taking into consideration non-studying days (e.g., holidays or specific days of the week). Additionally, students can customize the calendar to send email and text message reminders based on pre-determined study plans and self-assigned tasks. Multiple calendars can be created, if necessary.

Matt McBride, President of Fast Forward Academy, is pleased that more accounting students will be able to take advantage of the new study planner tool.

“We’ve already received quite a bit of positive feedback from tax preparers and enrolled agents using the tool,” stated McBride. “Now, even more students can use the free study planner to enhance their overall study experience with Fast Forward
