CCH, a Wolters Kluwer business has partnered with Ernst & Young LLP, provider of assurance, tax, transactions and advisory services, to feature regular articles from tax professionals at E&Y in CCH's Global Tax Weekly – A Closer Look publication. CCH provides tax, accounting and audit information, software and services to tax, accounting and business professionals.

The new collaboration will provide readers with additional guidance on topics such as mobility, cloud computing, social networking, big data analytics, accelerated adaptation and analysis of the latest international tax developments.

“Readers will definitely benefit from the tax technology perspectives of Ernst & Young LLP’s contributors, giving tax and financial experts a significant advantage in leveraging the latest tech developments to serve clients even more efficiently,” said Mark Friedlich, CCH’s Director of Publishing for Accounting, Audit and International Tax. “This collaboration further distinguishes Global Tax Weekly as a current and insightful one-stop source for expert guidance on worldwide tax and financial developments – providing readers with a competitive edge.”

Regular E&Y contributors will include Channing Flynn, Partner, International Tax Services and Global Technology Industry Tax Leader; Beth Carr, Partner, International Tax Services; Stephen Bates, Partner, International Tax; and Jonathan Cisler, Senior Manager, International Tax.

“Ernst & Young LLP’s tax technology professionals advise clients around the world and writing for Global Tax Weekly is a great opportunity to share our insight and experience with professionals working in all types of business sectors,” said Flynn. “It is critical that companies today understand that the adoption of new technologies may have a significant tax implication. As tax laws continue to evolve,
