The 2013 winners are: CCH Axcess; the Doc.It Suite; the NetClient CS mobile app from Thomson Reuters; Intuit's QuickBooks Online for iPad; and SmartVault for QuickBooks Online. Five finalists for the Innovation Awards were also recognized: ADP Smart Compliance; AICPA Navigator from CPA2Biz; the BNA Income Tax Planner Web system; CertCapture from Avalara; and Confirmation.com from Capital Confirmation.

The Innovation Awards were first presented in 2004, and serve to honor new or recently enhanced technologies that benefit tax and accounting professionals and their clients through improved workflow, increased accessibility, enhanced collaboration or other means.

"When voting for the winners and finalists for the Innovation Awards, we seek out technologies that offer significant benefit to tax and accounting professionals," said CPA Practice Advisor Executive Editor, M. Darren Root, a Certified Public Accountant.

"Technology has been a driving force behind the significant advances that professionals have made in productivity, and enhancements in workflow efficiency have been at the core of this evolution," he added. "With increasingly mobile lifestyles, it is not surprising that this year's award winners and finalists are all cloud-based, since professionals have come to expect full access to their programs and data anywhere, at any time, and from whatever device they prefer to use."

Root is also the managing partner of the Bloomington, Indiana, accounting firm Root & Associates, LLC, and is CEO of RootWorks, LLC.

Award winners are selected by CPA Practice Advisor's editorial board and awards committee, which include thought leaders and professionals from across the country. The publication, along with its digital content and interactive media, is the
