company's recently upgraded website

Jun. 26, 2013

Network Management Group Inc. (NMGI), an IT consulting and services provider, recently unveiled its recently upgraded website. Always with a client focus, enhancements were geared toward providing clients with the best possible online experience, including easy, intuitive access to information, updates, and live feeds; display of real-time support statistics; and remote access capability for immediate client support.

NMGI offers business-focused IT services designed to enhance operations, increase uptime, and provide clients with peace of mind where their IT needs are concerned. The technology company has served the public and private business sectors, focusing on small and mid-sized entities, for more than three decades. Services include networking, business and technology consulting, technology support, and a variety of web and media offerings.

“We know better than anyone that a company’s website is more than just a place to find product and service information. It’s a place to do business and receive immediate support,” said Steve Harper, CEO and co-founder of NMGI. “Our website is the first stop for many customers, so we made sure it was updated to provide superior client service and ease of use. Easy remote access to support is a perfect example of this.”

Within the website, visitors can also link directly to the company’s social media sites, sign up for the NMGI newsletter, review the company’s highly informative blog, access helpful links, and more.
