Mork brings nearly 30 years of experience at McGladrey to his new position, and is overseeing a resurgence of interest in ITA among 20 and 30-something professionals in the accounting and consulting industry. Cumley was instrumental in developing an emerging leader program in 2012, and has recently been appointed Chair of the ITA Young Leader committee.

“Up and coming professionals at CPA firms, tech consulting firms, and ITA technology vendor firms are noting the benefits of ongoing ITA participation – including professional development, mentorship, networking, and sharing knowledge in a trusted environment – and it’s these attributes that are specifically drawing younger members to our meetings,” said Mork. “We’ve created ITA conference tracks and groups for young members, and are now seeing the results. Our new Board is on firm footing for recognizing where ITA stands today, and the next steps needed to continue this effort to draw young professionals into ITA.”
