according to the latest Regional Employment Report from payroll and human resources technology provider ADP.

Isaac M. O'Bannon • May. 08, 2014

The most populous states in the country topped the list in job growth during April, according to the latest Regional Employment Report from payroll and human resources technology provider ADP.

The report, which is produced in collaboration with Moody's Analytics, Inc., also showed that private sector employment increased in all nine U.S. Census Bureau Divisions during the month of April 2014.

"All four major regions exceeded their six-month average for jobs added, although the Northeast did so only by a handful," said Ahu Yildirmaz, VP and head of the ADP Research Institute. "Despite the improvement in weather, the Northeast was the only major region measurably down from the previous month’s number of jobs
