

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us new Robert Half survey shows 39 percent of workers won't use all the paid vacation time they're given. The reasons: 38 percent are saving days in case they need them later, while 30 percent fear falling behind at work.

Isaac M. O'Bannon • May. 22, 2014

As summer approaches, employees are busy planning long-awaited vacations. But a new Robert Half survey shows 39 percent of workers won't use all the paid vacation time they're given. The reasons: 38 percent are saving days in case they need them later, while 30 percent fear falling behind at work.

The national study was developed by Robert Half, the world's first and largest specialized staffing firm, and conducted by an independent research firm. It is based on 436 telephone interviews with U.S. adults working in an office environment.

Workers were asked: “Do you typically use all of the paid vacation days you are provided by your company?” Their responses:

Yes 58%

No 39%

Don't know/no answer 3%

Workers who answered “no” were asked: “What is the primary reason you don't use all of your vacation time?” Their responses:

You want to save time in case you need it 38%

Too much work – you don't want to fall behind 30%

You don't like to take time off or vacations 12%

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

about any profession.”

McDonald added that managers should lead by example when it comes to saying “bon voyage” to the office. “Supervisors should encourage their teams to take a break and recharge, especially their top performers, who are often the most aggressive vacation savers and most susceptible to burnout. The best way to do this is by taking time off yourself,” he said.

Human Resources • Payroll

CPA Practice Advisor is registered with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) as a sponsor of continuing professional education on the National Registry of CPE Sponsors.

© 2024 Firmworks, LLC. All rights reserved