SmartVault has announced that it has been acquired by Reckon Limited, an Australia-based provider of small business accounting and management systems, both in the cloud, and desktop-based. SmartVault offers online document storage and sharing solutions for small businesses and QuickBooks users.

Under the agreement, SmartVault will continue operating as a separate business unit with the same brand, employee base and Houston offices, and will retain its U.S. management team, led by founder Eric Pulaski. Financial details of the acquisition were not disclosed.

“This acquisition brings together two companies with complementary product and market strategies – dedicated to providing solutions that increase efficiencies for accountants, bookkeepers and businesses,” said Dania Buchanan, chief marketing officer for SmartVault. “Together, SmartVault and Reckon can provide deeper and richer document management capabilities, and accelerate the time it takes us to deliver them to the market.”
