through Margaret's Place and other programs, including school-wide anti-violence campaigns, developmental workshops focusing on coping and leadership skills, and educational forums for school staff and parents.

CohnReznick spokesperson and 2014 Baseball Hall of Fame inductee Joe Torre attended the morning activities, offering his appreciation for the support his organization receives from the many charitable people who attended. Mr. Torre mingled with guests and took photos, while sharing a few stories with the participants.

Attending the event and speaking on behalf of SOWF was Vice Admiral Joe Maguire, U.S. Navy, Retired, President and CEO of SOWF. Before joining SOWF, Admiral Maguire served as Deputy Director for Strategic Operational Planning at the National Counterterrorism Center in Washington and was a career Naval Special Warfare Officer (SEAL) retiring as Vice Admiral.

Speaking on behalf of the Joe Torre Safe At Home Foundation during the evening program was Yolanda Jimenez, Executive Director. Ms. Jimenez has devoted over 30 years to a career in public service, and recently served as Commissioner of the New York City Mayor's Office to Combat Domestic Violence. She was also Commissioner of Community Affairs for the NYC Police Department.

Donation checks were presented to both charities by Frank P. Longobardi, CEO of CohnReznick; Ken Young, President of the CohnReznick Foundation; and John Corsaro, a CohnReznick partner and chairman of the outing.

"To be in the position to host this very special 25th anniversary event is something that we are extremely proud of as a Firm. Everyone here shares in our commitment to supporting the tireless efforts of these two special charities," said Longobardi.
