“With such a strong cultural fit between our two organizations, we believe we will be better together,” said Jonyce Bullock, managing partner at Squire. “Because we share important characteristics like a 100 percent commitment to quality and partnership with our clients, we believe there is deep synergy in our vision for the future.”

With 45 years in the Utah business community, Squire is one of the fastest growing firms in Utah and has received honors such as Accounting Today's Top 10 Firms headquartered in the Mountain States and Accounting Today's 2017 Best Firms to Work For. PRPR has been a fixture in the accounting services industry in Salt Lake City for nearly 75 years.

“PRPR's long tradition of excellent client service and of providing employees opportunities for growth will be enhanced by combining the resources of these two great firms,” said Jim Beaudoin, managing partner, PRPR. “We look forward to bringing added services to our clients and to meeting the many opportunities of Utah's dynamic and growing marketplace.”

The consolidated company will be known as Squire and will maintain its offices in both Orem and downtown Salt Lake City. Squire offers more than tax and audit services; the company also provides outsourced services, accounting/ERP systems implementation, buy/sell transaction support, wealth management assistance, and more. Industries served by both companies include construction, manufacturing/distribution, direct sales, government, tax-exempt organizations, technology/life sciences and professional services, among others.
