What peers, clients and friends say about Craig:

Craig is a technologist, passionate about empowering small businesses around the globe with business management solutions that enable them to compete with their largest of rivals.

What technology or business process does Craig see affecting the tax and accounting profession in the next five years?

"I anticipate a significant shift that allows companies to use the Internet as a more interactive medium for commerce, inter-business communication, and corporate management. Vendors, customers and mobile staff will see their physical location become increasingly irrelevant, as we are able to allocate business processes as effectively across the globe as effectively as across the hall. This same infrastructure can serve to dramatically reduce the complexity of managing our taxation, reporting, and compliance burdens."
