What peers, clients and friends say about Lesley:

Lesley is viewed as a leader at Intuit, building strong teams who are passionate about accountants. She sets an example for her team that keeps them engaged and close to their [accountant] customers. Lesley is an advocate for accountants both within Intuit and in the community. She is recognized throughout Intuit as an expert on the accountant customer. Her grasp of the needs of accountants and their firms allows her to shape Intuit programs to enable accountants to grow their practices. She seeks creative solutions to help meet their needs and is able to influence Intuit to make beneficial changes happen.

What technology or business process does Lesley see affecting the tax and accounting profession in the next five years?

“Accountants will have to continue to look for ways to diversify themselves beyond traditional accounting and tax preparation. They will need to find alternative business consulting growth opportunities to create a year round stream of revenue. Clients are looking for a ‘one-stop shop’ when selecting an accounting professional. For example, they may seek financial advice, software consultation and estate planning from one individual. Technology will allow accountants the flexibility to diversify and serve a variety of clients in locations throughout
