Sasan is a motivator, sets a high bar, always focused on the customer, leads by example, and builds a talented and engaged team.

What technology or business process does Sasan see affecting the tax and accounting profession in the next five years?

“Work beyond the desktop and office... growing staffing pressures and instant access expectations from more web savvy clients will force accountants to work beyond the office and desktop... remote employees and online collaboration will grow... the need to become productive will be a must. Expanded service offerings... tax self service and work efficiency will drive prices/revenues down in core services, while aging client base generates demand for new services.”
