“CCH’s Open Integration Platform is a complete game-changer in the way value is delivered to the industry. Professionals can quickly connect to the software tools and applications they need to meet their workflow and research needs,” said Christian Wolfe, CCH Business Intelligence & Strategy Vice President. “With partners such as WSG developing professional services applications for CRM, project accounting, resource management and time and expense entry that can be leveraged across our platform’s service oriented architecture, firms can combine applications they love with their CCH SaaS solutions to fully support their technological ‘ecosystem’ and maximize their cloud capabilities.”

CCH’s Open Integration Platform is designed to increase productivity and efficiency by allowing select applications to integrate within each other and includes solutions developed by CCH, third-party providers and applications created within a firm or corporation. Client, staff, administrative and security data are among some of the capabilities featured in a single database that is shared across the multiple participating applications. Users have access to an integrated workflow through variety of solutions from different providers.

CCH provides interested vendors with software licenses and tools, technical training opportunities for developing and testing integrations and CCH’s SaaS platform Open Integration kits. The kits include tutorials for successful integration with CCH’s ProSystem fx Suite.

“CCH’s business philosophy underscores partnership, enablement and facilitation of the success of the entire profession,” added Wolfe. “We help professionals in firms of all sizes advance their business competitiveness and increase their relevancy to their clients. With the Open Integration Platform, we’re leveraging the innovative power of the marketplace so that CCH can drive higher value to our customers than any one vendor can as a stand-alone provider.”
