The NetClient CS Mobile App from Thomson Reuters was awarded a 2013 Innovation Award from CPA PracticeAdvisor during an awards ceremony in Los Angeles on Monday evening.

The first mobile app of its kind, NetClient CS mobile provides accounting firm clients with on-the-go access to their NetClient CS services and content from a variety of mobile devices while allowing the accounting firm to retain control over which services are available.

Clients can access tax returns, financial statements, and other documents that have been pushed to NetClient CS by the firm, as well as online accounting and payroll services and much more. NetClient CS mobile makes real-time collaboration between accountants and their clients easier, more automated, and more convenient.

Firm clients use a firm-branded interface to access information and applications on their smartphones or tablets, elevating the firm's image as a client-friendly, tech-savvy service provider.

With the trend of ubiquitous connectivity to the web and instantaneous access for staff and clients alike, NetClient CS mobile enables firms to meet their clients' expectations that their business partners and professional service providers will offer convenient online access on virtually any device.

The NetClient CS mobile app is available as a free download to Apple and Android devices. The app comes with demo data, allowing anyone to review its features and functionality.
