Ray Barlow and David Bergstein Join Intuit

Intuit has announced David Bergstein, CPA.CITP and Ray Barlow have recently joined its Accountant and Advisor Group. Barlow joined the company last month as the senior Strategic Customer Leader. He has more than 25 years of experience working with accountants and their firms. Before joining Intuit, Barlow was the Vice President of Sales & Marketing and a member of the Executive Group at CCH, a Wolters Kluwer business, where he was responsible for the company's external marketing initiatives, the complete portfolio of CCH products and led a team of more than 350 sales representatives, account managers, sales managers and sales specialists. Barlow also worked at Datamatics Ltd and Thomson RIA, where he started his career in the tax and accounting industry as a sales representative before being promoted to Regional Sales Manager and Vice President of Sales.

In his new position, Bergstein will report to Barlow and have responsibility for assisting CPA firms in their move to the Cloud. Bergstein was previously the director of strategic relationships for CCH, where he was responsible for cultivating relationships with CPAs. Prior to working for CCH, Bergstein worked for the former CLR/Fast Tax, Thomson Reuters, AccountantsWorld and CPA2Biz. He was also an accounting professor at Suffolk County Community College in New York for more than 15 years and has served on the AICPA's Top Tech Technology Team. Bergstein currently serves on the Florida Institute of CPA's Business Technology Section and the Financial Literacy Committee.
