Online document storage and file-sharing developer SmartVault has announced new integration options for expense reporting and image management.

The new integration with automated expense reporting tool Nexonia gives users a powerful, highly configurable expense reports system, supported by intuitive web and mobile interfaces that greatly simplify the expense management process. Additionally, a three-way integration between SmartVault, Nexonia, and the users' accounting system (QuickBooks or Xero) offers a streamlined solution for automating workflow from expense entry through to having the expense source document accessed directly from the accounting system.

Nexonia's integration with SmartVault enables users to immediately sync receipts uploaded in the Nexonia app directly with the associated entry in QuickBooks or Xero—offering a single, centralized source document repository and built-in audit reporting. Seamless integration also means that there is no need for manual data transfers, which eliminates risk of data entry errors and saves a great deal of time.

“We are thrilled to have Nexonia join our growing ecosystem of apps that are utilizing SmartVault's document management platform to help increase efficiencies in common paper-based workflows,” stated SmartVault founder and CEO, Eric Pulaski. “Offering customers the ability to upload receipts to Nexonia, then have that file automatically sync to the entry in the accounting system means fewer manual tasks and a built-in audit trail. It is another example of the value that integrated apps can have in improving business efficiency.”

SmartVault’s patented integration with QuickBooks, combined with the new Canon imageFORMULA integration, delivers tangible and immediate value—especially to accountants that work heavily in QuickBooks ” said Pulaski. “I was thrilled at the support we received from the Canon team in helping us bring such a valuable integration to the accounting profession.
