Two young professionals at Ernst & Young LLP have been named winners of Consulting magazine's new award "Rising Stars of the Profession," which recognizes outstanding talent under the age of 35.

They are Anthony Carmello, Partner in the firm's Advisory Services Risk practice, and Anthony Swanson, Senior Manager in the firm's Advisory Services Customer practice. Carmello was selected in the Leadership category and Swanson was selected in the Strategy Consulting category.

"Accomplished leaders like Anthony Carmello and Anthony Swanson who lead with courage and deliver exceptional client work embody the best of EY," said Bob Patton, the EY Americas Advisory Vice Chair. "It's gratifying to work with such promising young talent and a thrill to consider the possibilities they'll bring forth for our clients and in the industry as a whole. I am pleased to see their extraordinary work recognized."

Carmello and Swanson were among over 200 nominees considered by Consulting magazine. Carmello was nominated by Jay Layman, the firm's Americas Advisory Risk Leader. Swanson was nominated by Kristen Vennum who was honored by the publication as one of the Women Leaders in Consulting in 2009.

Carmello specializes in evaluating business processes, IT environments and operations to assist companies in managing risk, improving performance and enabling change. His commitment to EY, the success and satisfaction of his clients and dedication to the growth and development of his team members are just a few factors that led to Anthony's promotion to Partner of Ernst & Young LLP in 2013.

“I am truly honored to win the Rising Stars of the Profession Leadership Award and advisory company focused on market entry, product launches, mergers and acquisitions.

“I joined EY because there were so many leaders I wanted to emulate, so it is very humbling to be nominated by them for this award,” said Swanson. “I am proud to be a part of EY and the energy and passion they bring to building a better working world.”

Carmello holds CPA and CISA certifications, is a graduate of Miami University and resides in Chicago, Illinois. Swanson is a graduate of Northwestern University and also resides in Chicago.
