trust, open communication and transparency results in lower staff turnover and deeper, more strategic relationships between staff and clients.”

Since 1999, the year Plante Moran first appeared on the FORTUNE list, the firm has tripled in revenue and doubled its number of staff. It's also expanded from 17 offices to 23, including three international locations.

“It's no coincidence that for the last 17 years the firm has experienced growth and success while remaining a mainstay on the FORTUNE list,” Krater adds. “The firm's accomplishments are borne of a culture instilled decades ago by its co-founder, Frank Moran.

“Frank was looking to create something more than year-to-year success; he was looking to create a sustainable organization. And the foundation of a sustainable organization? A great culture.”

Plante Moran has a 90-year tradition of being “relatively jerk-free” and of caring about its clients, staff and community. It's built on foundational principles such as:

- One-firm firm, a “we're all in this together philosophy” eliminating competing office-level profit centers. As a result, clients get access to the best resources, regardless of geography
- Optimizing vs. maximizing, putting people and a long-term view before profits
- Doing the right thing for the right reasons
