

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us tax collection agency from entering into agreements restricting the use of...

Apr. 18, 2016

Perhaps “tax simplification” won’t just be buzzwords” used by politicians much longer.

A new bill introduced by Senator Elizabeth Warren (D-MA) could affect the filing of federal income tax returns by millions of Americans. The “Tax Filing Simplification Act of 2016” requires the IRS to develop a free service for filing tax returns directly with the federal government and prohibits the nation’s tax collection agency from entering into agreements restricting the use of free online tax preparation and filing services. The proposed legislation would also allow taxpayers to download information already provided to the IRS by third party sources and completely

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us presidential hopeful Senators Bernie Sanders (D-VT), as well as Senators Sheldon Whitehouse (D-RI) Tom Udall (D-NM), Jeanne Shaheen (D-NH), Al Franken (D-MN), Tammy Baldwin (D-WI) and Edward J. Markey (D-MA).

“Tax Day has become an opportunity for corporations to profit off of confusion over our complicated tax code. That is wrong,” added Sanders “The Tax Filing Simplification Act would end the absurdity of Americans having to pay private companies hundreds of dollars to pay their taxes. We must make tax filing as easy as possible, not direct profits to private companies at the expense of working families.”

Sanders’ main challenger for the Democratic presidential bid and the current front runner, former Secretary of State and Senator Hilary Clinton (D-NY) echoed the sentiments. “This important piece of legislation will help us build a better, fairer tax system,” said Clinton in a prepared statement. “This proposal will help take the headache out of Tax Day, saving Americans both time and money.”

In conjunction with the introduction of the Tax Filing Simplification Act, Warren released a staff report detailing how taxpayers have incurred tax filing costs for decades while having to share their personal information with third parties. In particular, the report targets the Free File Alliance of tax software vendors that has partnered with the IRS, claiming that the program is currently used by only three percent of eligible filers and offers a confusing “maze of offerings” that can trick taxpayers into buying unnecessary products.

The Free File Alliance objected to both the proposed bill and the report. “The Tax Filing Simplification Act is anything but simple,” said Free File Alliance executive director Tim Hugo. “Not only would the legislation create a tremendous and potentially harmful conflict of interest for the American people by enshrining roles of tax preparer, tax collector, tax auditor and tax enforcer together in one entity, the IRS, but the system’s very creation would also be a huge burden for taxpayers. The

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

Tax practitioners should be aware that their roles could change dramatically if the legislation is enacted. In any event, absent a complete overhaul of the tax code, there will still be a need for real tax planning throughout the year.

Income Tax • Taxes

CPA Practice Advisor is registered with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) as a sponsor of continuing professional education on the National Registry of CPE Sponsors.

© 2024 Firmworks, LLC. All rights reserved