Over his professional career, Harris has been named one of the St. Louis Business Journal's 30 Under 30 and Diverse Business Leaders, and the University of Missouri – St. Louis named him an Outstanding Young Alumni. He also received the Outstanding Leadership in Advancing Diversity Award by Missouri Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Rising Star Award by the National Association of Black Accountants, the Young Professional of the Year from Urban League of Metropolitan St. Louis, and the Salute to Young Leaders Award from the St. Louis American.

His advice to those entering the profession: “The more you give to this profession, the more it will give back to you. We have to be prepared to serve, whether it's working within a firm or working with a company.” Harris says, “NABA provides its members with that opportunity.”

The additions of new NABA Board leadership continues to signify NABA's continuous efforts supporting the motto

Lifting As We Climb and NABA's Vision2020 strategic plan with goals in four key areas: Sustainability, Awareness, Action, and Connection. Such leadership will continue to strengthen NABA's voice and position as the advocating force for black professionals in the accounting and finance arenas.
