University Assistant Professor of Accounting Pamela Schmidt with the Best Education Paper Award. Schmidt received the award for her educational business case paper "Casey's Collections: A Risk Assessment Case," co-authored with Kimberly Swanson Church, Assistant Professor of Accounting at University of Missouri-Kansas City. The Best Education Paper is a national award sponsored by the AAA Teaching, Learning and Curriculum Section. Schmidt's paper presents case-based learning as a solution for the need for student engagement and real-world experiences, which would provide auditing and accounting information system students with a realistic risk assessment business project that is grounded in the industry's current standards for risk assessment and business continuity planning.
