TSheets, a developer of time tracking software, today announced a deeper integration with Intuit's QuickBooks Online designed to deliver accurate payroll and invoicing – without the manual entry. Customers will now be able track billable time against customers, services, employees and more, as well as easily review, edit and approve time straight from within QuickBooks Online. Customers will also have access to accurate, detailed reports on employee hours that will provide invaluable real-time insights for accounting professionals and their clients.

Mariann Bottiani, owner of Chaos to Calm Productivity Solutions and QuickBooks ProAdvisor, has been using this latest integration between TSheets time tracking and QuickBooks Online to streamline her HVAC client's invoicing process, resulting in a 6 percent increase of billable time.

Fatigued by the tedious procedure of processing stacks of paper timesheets and manually inputting data into one HVAC client's QuickBooks Online account, Bottiani became a beta tester of TSheets' mobile, automated timesheets, which are accessible within the QuickBooks Online account she uses to process invoices and payroll. Immediately following the application of the new system, Bottiani gained valuable insight into her client's business and could instantly see 26 percent of their time was spent on non-billable hours. With that figure in mind, Bottiani collaborated with her client to reduce non-billable hours down to 20 percent, in an effort to further help her client's HVAC company succeed.

“We tried using employee time tracking software that didn't integrate with QuickBooks Online, but it was clunky and inefficient,” said Bottiani. “There were a lot of steps involved in getting the time data from here to there, and that was frustrating for a lot of the workers. The QuickBooks Online integration has definitely sped up our billing and payroll process. My client loves the new system. It's convenient, and it makes us all more accurate and more productive.”

“Our goal is to equip accountants, like Mariann, with the tools to help grow their
