From the 2017 reviews of Time Management systems.

Available for as an iOS or Android app, ATracker allows you to start and stop time with a single touch. Limited setup is needed prior to using the app, so you'll only need to enter a task or a list of tasks to start using the app. Once a task is entered, simply click on the that task when desired, which starts the automatic timer.

Clicking on another task automatically stops time tracking for the first task, while tracking the second task. All tasks are recorded in both a list view and a calendar view for easy review, with users able to edit details by simply clicking on an entry.

ATracker creates informative pie charts and graphs outlining how time is spent for a particular time frame, whether that's daily, weekly, monthly. The graphs and charts can be easily shared via social media, email, or exported to a CSV file if desired.

ATracker is available in a variety of languages, and works with iPhone, iPad, and Android devices. There is a support portal available for users to access that offers FAQ's for both iOS and Android users, along with the ability to request support or access the user community. Great for those handling multiple tasks daily, ATracker offers a free, limited version of the app as well as a full version which runs $4.99.
