ACRS, MACRS, AMT, and Corporate ACE. The product automatically calculates MACRS depreciation for all qualified fixed assets and will also compute luxury automobile depreciation and annual truck and van depreciation limitations.

Depreciation Calculator has been completely updated for 2018 and has also added additional IRS and state forms as well as support schedules.

As a calculation engine, Depreciation Calculator does not track asset details such as warranty information, insurance details or maintenance and repair schedules. While the product does support simply asset exchanges, it does not handle complex like-kind exchanges.

Depreciation Calculator offers a decent number of reports and forms that can be printed, including Regular Depreciation for Federal, State, and Books. Other reports include Asset Listing, AMT Depreciation, Current Year Acquisitions, Current Year Dispositions, Group Totals and Group Totals Summary. The Asset Detail Listing provides users with a description of each asset, the serial number and assigned asset ID number, the date the asset was acquired, and the cost of the asset. Depreciation Calculator also includes a variety of forms that are available to print as well.

Depreciation Calculator is designed to work as a depreciation calculator engine and currently does not offer integration or import/export capability in any capacity.

Users can access both general and technical FAQs on the Cellutionware website. The system Help function is easily accessed within the application by pressing the F1 key. Technical support is available at no cost for all registered system users, provided that the program is updated annually. Support can be accessed via email or telephone during regular business hours.

Depreciation Calculator is a good fit for small to mid-sized businesses or accounting
