The IRS recently announced it is redacting details such as the full EIN and business name from their tax transcripts to improve the security of taxpayer data. This makes the EIN verification process more difficult for CPAs, tax and finance professionals, and payroll companies.

ALM Intelligence's Benefits division, Judy Diamond Associates, has launched a new API allowing the research and verification capabilities of the EIN Finder database to integrate with a variety of platforms.

The upgraded EIN Finder provides users with the ability to append and verify EIN data instantly. EIN Finder allows individuals to verify business identities or complete various tax forms (1099s, 1040, and 990s). Since the API can be connected to multiple systems, it creates a more efficient workflow that is easily scalable to a client's specific needs.

"Businesses and individuals file tax returns every year and are charged a standard fee for incorrect information which makes finding accurate data critical to business operations," said William Moomaw, Senior Product Manager, ALM Intelligence. "EIN Finder allows our customers to know these businesses are real. Additionally, automating access to our database saves our clients time, reduces fraud rates, and
