Maner Costerisan announced it has named Cortney Plowman a manager in the firm. Plowman has worked for five years for the Lansing, Michigan-based certified public accounting firm and will serve in the audit department in her new supervisory role.

In her managerial position, Plowman will be organizing and overseeing audits to help identify risks within client organizations and foster management plans to address those risks. In addition, she will assist in the career development and professional advancement of apprentice-level staff within department teams. It's the people she interacts with, both inside and outside the firm, who make the work Plowman performs so rewarding.

"Our firm culture is amazing, and I enjoy the way we all work together," she said. "Also, the variety of clients I get to work with keeps everything very interesting."

The 29-year-old certified public accountant began working at Maner Costerisan as
