base.

“Xero first created single-ledger double-entry accounting through the cloud. Now we are moving beyond that into the future, providing customers high-integrity data through Hubdoc, giving our customers the ability to see insights in real-time, as well as contributing to an integrated experience for completing end-to-end tax and compliance work with Xero Tax. These are critical elements in helping us to create a seamless workflow for accountants and bookkeepers,” said Anna Curzon, Chief Product Officer at Xero.

Hubdoc and Xero come together to augment business intelligence

Hubdoc plays an important role in accelerating Xero's vision for intelligent automation and code-free accounting. Hubdoc captures information from bills and receipts, eliminates manual data entry, and ensures bank reconciliation is easy within Xero, saving time and reducing errors.

Since Xero acquired Hubdoc in 2018, it has been advancing its data capture technology powered by machine learning, doubling the volume of documents processed.

With Hubdoc now included in Xero Business Edition plans it will bring the functionality to even more small businesses globally, and enhance Xero's code-free accounting capabilities with future plans to continue to enhance the integration, making it more seamless and bringing the automation technology to other parts of the platform.

Xero Tax gives UK accountants a smarter way to prepare and file accounts

Xero Tax will launch in the UK with compliance tax and accounts production at the end of March, to provide accountants and bookkeepers with an easier way to deal with compliance.
