Control in a crisis

How to manage spending responsibly, keep business continuity, and grow during periods of economic crisis.

At the best of times, controlling spending in an organization can be hard. A recent survey conducted before the global COVID-19 crisis revealed that 30% of employees have expensed a personal purchase while pretending it was for business.

Now, with most of the work force at home, spending oversight is even harder (and more important) than ever. With that in mind, Procurify recently launched a new guide – titled Control in a Crisis – to help companies to control spending during what may become the most severe economic downturn of our lifetimes. Among the
