XCM has launched a new application programming interface (API) to retrieve audit information from XCMworkflow. This API is part of the award-winning XCMapi group of over 50 APIs that enable firms and businesses to access and update their XCMworkflow or XCMscheduler data. XCM is a provider of cloud-based workflow and productivity enablement solutions for tax and accounting professionals.

As part of the overall connectivity strategy, APIs enable the XCM application to talk to third party solutions and exchange data to extend the value already provided to XCM customers. This latest GET API will allow XCM customers to access their engagement task information, including key dates and acceptance detail, typically captured throughout the lifecycle of an audit engagement, used to create a number of unique reporting needs and often leveraged during peer review.

"We are delighted to see the creative ways that XCMapi customers have been using their data," said XCM Chief Product Officer Jairam Padmanabhan. "At the end of the day, XCMapi further extends the capabilities of XCMworkflow to give our customers

"The open architecture of XCMapi gives the customer complete control over how their workflow data is used," said XCM Vice President of Development & Engineering Sanjath Sulkunte. "It is immensely gratifying to see the API stack grow as a result of our experienced development teams' ability to incorporate customer feedback and improve their user experience."
