

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

The IRS pushed back the due date for filing 2019 returns from April 15 to July 15. Here are several key points relating to the extension.

Get a second extension. In response to the national health crisis, the IRS postponed the usual April 15 tax filing deadline to July 15. This extension also applies to payment of tax liability on a 2019 return. What's more, you can still obtain the automatic six-month filing extension by filing a request on Form 4868. This enables you to file your 2019 return as late as October 15. Caveat: This second extension does NOT extend the due date for paying tax beyond July 15.

Spread out estimated tax. The extension of “Tax Day” for 2019 returns also applies

Hello. It looks like you’re using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

They can now also take until July 15 to file and pay tax on a 2019 return. In addition, note that members of the military qualify for an extra 180 days for tax filing if they are serving in a combat zone or are deployed outside the U.S. while participating in a contingency operation.

CPA Practice Advisor is registered with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) as a sponsor of continuing professional education on the National Registry of CPE Sponsors.

© 2024 Firmworks, LLC. All rights reserved