“ACM and BDO have had a very strong relationship and worked closely together for many years, and reuniting is a natural next step on the path we’ve built together,” said Gregory J. Anton, chairman and CEO of ACM. “At our core, ACM is a people, client and community-focused organization, so it was imperative that we combine with a firm grounded in those values — and is why we chose to continue to grow our Rocky Mountain footprint with BDO. What makes this combination unique is bringing the touch of the largest locally owned firm together with the fifth largest firm in the world. The resources we will be able to bring to clients in the region is unmatched.”

The BDO and ACM combination is a homecoming for Anton, who spent the first 15 years of his career at BDO before cofounding ACM. He is also a past chairman of the American Institute of CPAs (AICPA), the world’s largest member organization representing the CPA profession. At BDO, Anton’s leadership will bolster the firm’s geographic presence and drive growth in the Rocky Mountain market.

“The combination of BDO and ACM is a natural fit given the firms’ shared histories and complementary cultures,” said Stacey Duke, president and managing partner of ACM. “ACM was already a part of the BDO family – we’ve just made it official. The combination of the two firms demonstrates BDO’s commitment to expanding its footprint in the region, and to uncovering strategic opportunities in both familiar and brand-new territories.”

BDO will maintain ACM’s four existing offices in Denver, Northern Colorado, Boulder and Laramie.
