Hero award.

Before the COVID-19 pandemic, 1 in 7 Georgians were food insecure, including 1 in 5 kids. Social distancing, decreased work opportunities and childcare facility closures have exacerbated the struggles of families who were already wondering how they would put their next meal on the table and impacting a new group of Georgians who have never sought food assistance before. All donations made during the Georgia Accounting Food Fight go directly to supporting Georgia's food banks in their mission to alleviate hunger in our communities during this time of increased need.

All funds raised stay local and benefit the food bank that serves each participating firm or company's local community. The Georgia Society of CPAs, in partnership with the Georgia Food Bank Association, is committed to helping provide critical food support to our neighbors living with food insecurity and assisting Georgia's food banks in the fight against hunger. This year, the Food Fight's fundraising goal is to raise 200,000 dollars statewide during the two-week competition. If that goal is reached, it will mark one million dollars raised in total since the inception of the Food Fight and the equivalent of four million meals provided to Georgians in need.
