Regardless of the business model, each firm has a common desire to complete each engagement with the perfect balance of quality, productivity, and staffing to achieve their goals. This latest ebook discusses five practical changes that firms can make to support their business goals by creating efficiencies and increasing productivity.

- Rethinking their routing sheets. Rather than relying on manual processes such as paper routing sheets or spreadsheets, explore transforming them into a standardized and automated digital process
- Minimizing email fatigue. Instead of using email to transmit information, enable staff to access information within the context of their day-to-day work by using dashboards and notifications that integrate with the software they already use
- Creating consistent, repeatable processes. By taking steps to document the end-to-end process deliberately, engagements can be started with fewer questions, completed faster, and clients have a greater certainty of the end product
- Driving decisions with dashboards. Highly visual dashboards can help turn numbers into easy-to-read visuals that help benchmark business performance with real-time productivity and key performance indicators
- Promoting accountability through visibility. Giving staff tools that provide clear visibility into the work that needs to be done and empowering them to choose a project that fits their skillset level promotes better accountability and firm efficiency
