Mini study sessions, complete with materials, are proven as effective as longer stretches of studying. Surgent Accounting & Financial Education, a KnowFully Learning Group company and provider of professional education for accounting, finance, and tax professionals, has launched a new mobile app that enables people using its exam review courses to study whenever and wherever they can make the time.

Available for iOS in the Apple App Store and on Google Play, Surgent's Study Companion app generates tailored plans and materials for "microbursts" of study, allowing learners to accumulate review time while managing tight schedules. Providing access to all of the content as the desktop experience, the app also features the same adaptive learning technology.

Whether on a mobile device or your computer, Surgent's CPA Review platform continuously evaluates a person's knowledge across exam content areas and provides feedback, appropriate materials, and assessments in order to fill gaps and pass the exam faster.

"Preparing for accounting and finance exams demands a great deal of effort, but regularly setting aside hours for study isn't always feasible," said Elizabeth Kolar, executive vice president of Surgent. "Many of our learners have to hold down a job and fulfill other obligations in addition to prepping for exams. Our new app is based on data that shows short bursts of study are effective for retaining information. Now, even if students can only commit to minutes at a time, they can keep progressing toward exam readiness."

Learners can use the app to reinforce skills by selecting a study time that works for

Other exam review apps group a learner with others at a similar stage in their exam preparation and push for linear completion of all areas. Surgent's Study Companion is individualized, driving a user only to content that they must study and areas they need to improve. Surgent also assesses cumulative readiness through its ReadySCORE tool, helping the busy professional know if they're prepared to pass the exam before they sit for it.

"Surgent educates professionals throughout every stage of their career in accounting or finance," said Kolar. "Everyone's journey in our field starts with effective certification exam preparation and our Surgent Study Companion is designed to set learners up for success now and well into the future."
