

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

IRS

Department of the Treasury Internal Revenue Service

A Boston cop will end up winning a federal conviction on a scratch-off ticket.

Dana Lamb, 57, of Roslindale, has agreed with federal prosecutors to plead guilty to one count of filing a false document with the Internal Revenue Service, according to the Massachusetts U.S. Attorney's office.

In May 2020, prosecutors say Lamb won $10,000 on a Massachusetts State Lottery Commission scratch ticket, which he then sold to a convenience store owner for $7,500 in cash.

The unnamed store owner then allegedly sold that ticket to another unnamed person who redeemed it with the state. Lamb is alleged to have not reported the $10,000 in his tax returns for that year, according to court records. He now owes $1,800 in back taxes.

While a plea hearing has not yet been scheduled, the agreed-upon deal released

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

©2022 MediaNews Group, Inc. Visit at bostonherald.com. Distributed by Tribune Content Agency, LLC.

CPA Practice Advisor is registered with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) as a sponsor of continuing professional education on the National Registry of CPE Sponsors.

© 2024 Firmworks, LLC. All rights reserved