

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us processes already. The third and equally critical element to the success of a thriving

...

Jun. 25, 2022

By Kane Polakoff and Kim Austin.

Teamwork: The process of working collaboratively with a group of people to achieve a goal. So, what's the goal? Creating a healthy and thriving client accounting and advisory services (CAAS) practice.

A strong CAAS practice includes three elements: people, processes, and technology. Hopefully, you've established a strong internal team with efficient training and processes already. The third and equally critical element to the success of a thriving

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

Ok, you've done your research and selected your technology partners, so how do you ensure the partner relationships you've decided upon are successful? Let's explore some best practices to keep in mind as you work to establish your partnerships and take them to the next level.

Nothing is more important than open communication and ensuring you and your partners align on the expectations for delivering exceptional client experiences. Remember to:

DTR: Define the relationship

- Think long-term. Developing partnerships that can grow with your practice will help keep your employees up to date on the technology and support client retention.
- Communicate regularly. Establish a cadence with each partner to communicate feedback and develop a plan to implement.
- Utilize support. The technology partner should have a robust support function available to you on-demand. Support should be knowledgeable and proactive, so take advantage of it and leverage their expertise to benefit your clients and save you time.
- Refer when it makes sense. You're not obligated to send ten clients to your technology partner each month. Be clear you will refer when it makes the most sense for your clients and only after a solid foundation is built.

DTW: Do the work

- Invest in the relationship. Put in the effort to build the relationship and work to grow it. Present at a conference together, host webinars, or create thought leadership content that highlights the advantages such a partnership creates for you, your partner, and your mutual clients.

- Don't rush it. Strong partnerships don't happen overnight, but by nurturing the Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

- Share a vision. Partnerships will never work if you and your partners only look out for your own interests. It's crucial to work as a team and keep the focus on the success of your mutual clients.

When you work as a team to find solutions, there is much to be gained for both you and your partners, and especially your mutual clients. Every partner you select might not turn out to be the right one, but by implementing the best practices above, you have the best chance at success. Be willing to devote the time to research, develop, and nurture your partnerships, and you'll find teamwork truly does make the CAAS dream work.

=====

Kim is Director of Global Strategic Accounting Partnerships at Avalara. Kane is National Practice Leader, Client Accounting and Advisory Services Division at UHY Advisors.

Accounting • Advisory • Firm Management • Technology

CPA Practice Advisor is registered with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) as a sponsor of continuing professional education on the National Registry of CPE Sponsors.

© 2024 Firmworks, LLC. All rights reserved