she held a series of regional leadership roles in the US, for Tax and other parts, including Assurance.

Kate Barton, outgoing EY Global Vice-Chair – Tax, says: “Ricker’s track record speaks for itself. She has had an exceptional career with EY and has built a solid reputation as a leader who understands clients’ needs, inspires EY professionals and delivers results. EY Tax is a leading business that is seeing strong growth, and I am sure that in her steady hands it will go from strength to strength.”

“I am honored to take on this new role that gives me the privilege of leading this diverse business and serving EY clients, and EY people, across the globe,” Ricker said. “I can’t think of a time when tax, law and people matters have been such dynamic forces for businesses and governments across so many global issues – from international trade to climate change and the evolving digital economy. I am excited to help shape services and solutions as clients face these critical challenges and reimagine opportunities.”
