IRIS solutions are designed to give customers the flexibility to choose their deployment option and migrate to the cloud at their own pace.

“Our team is thrilled about the latest release from a security perspective, but it also supports other long-term objectives like flexible working options,” said Matt Sharp, Office Manager at Fates Bodily and Parker. “Furthermore, the DocuSign integration saves our team two to three minutes per document by reducing upload and send times which is critical when working with large document sets.”

“Efficient document management is essential to running a successful accounting firm, and every firm has different needs based on their clients’ requirements, current technology solutions and future growth plans,” said Don Emery, general manager for Doc.It By IRIS.

“We are excited to introduce these new document management capabilities to offer firms expanded scalability through cloud software. IRIS is committed to taking the pain out of processes, and these new features will allow firms to decrease time spent on document management and increase focus on delivering valuable services to their clients to further drive growth.”
