KPMG LLP is relocating its US headquarters to the far west side of Manhattan, while cutting its office space in New York by more than 40%.

The global auditing firm has signed a lease for roughly 450,000 square feet (42,000 square meters) across 12 floors at Two Manhattan West, a skyscraper that's under construction in the Hudson Yards area, according to a statement Tuesday. The offices will house more than 5,500 employees, KPMG said.

The new space is a reduction from the roughly 800,000 square feet that KPMG currently leases across three towers in Midtown: 345 Park Ave., 560 Lexington Ave.

and 1350 Sixth Ave. The firm plans to leave those buildings.
