Because April 15, the standard deadline, falls on a Saturday in 2023. When the deadline falls on a weekend, the IRS moves the deadline to the next business day. However, that Monday, April 17, 2023, is Emancipation Day, a holiday recognized in Washington, D.C., where the IRS is headquartered. April 17 is also Patriot's Day, a state holiday in Maine and Massachusetts.

As a result of all of this, the deadline for filing federal income tax returns (generally Form 1040), will be Tuesday, April 18, 2023, and most states usually follow the same calendar for state income tax returns.

In other words... be ready to have your taxes filed (or an automatic extension filed) by April 18. Depending on when a taxpayer files, they can often receive their tax refund payments (check or direct deposit) within only 2-3 weeks.

Will the 2023 tax filing season be normal? It will likely be closer to normal than it has been since 2019, the last tax filing season before COVID caused widespread office closures, even at the IRS, which delayed the 2020 tax filing deadline by several months, and even the 2021 filing season. The pandemic also ushered in many tax credits and deductions for businesses, as well as stimulus payments for most Americans. These were also sometimes given as a credit on a taxpayer's taxes, if they did not receive payment directly. Most individual and married tax filers will not have pandemic or stimulus-related issues on this year's tax filings.

W2s and 1099s Due by January 31

For business owners, another important deadline to remember is that forms W2 and 1099 must be filed by January 31, 2023.
