Forty-four Indiana CPA Society (INCPAS) member volunteers will participate in 71 in-person and on-demand high school presentations this week, reaching 31 high schools and nearly 1,800 high school students.

INCPAS volunteers will be sharing their personal experiences as a current or aspiring CPA, the best part of their jobs, and how their work impacts individuals, organizations and communities. The ultimate goal of these presentations is to highlight the wide-ranging opportunities that accompany a CPA license.

“As CPAs, we are more than well-positioned to provide meaningful mentorship to accounting students seeking guidance,” said Jose Castro, CPA, manager at Protiviti. “We have a story to share. Our academic background and professional experience, regardless of how limited it may seem to us, could mean everything to a student who
