

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

Pay Day

More than half of accounting professionals believe they are well-compensated, a LinkedIn survey revealed.

Jason Bramwell • Dec. 08, 2022

Accountants might be burned out but they feel much better about the career they chose on the 15th and the last day of every month.

That's because more than half of accounting professionals who participated in LinkedIn's most recent Workforce Confidence Index Survey say they are well-compensated for the job they do.

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

1	Product Management	62%
2	Engineering	60%
3	Real Estate	59%
4	Program and Project Management	58%
5	Consulting	57%
6	Human Resources	56%
7	Finance	56%
8	Purchasing	55%
9	Information Technology	54%
10	Legal	54%
11	Business Development	54%
12	Marketing	53%
13	Accounting	52%
14	Sales	50%
15	Quality Assurance	49%

Source: LinkedIn Market Research

Note: 32,162 professionals in the U.S. were surveyed from June 4 to September 9, 2022.

The workers who are the most unhappy about their pay are educators (39%), entrepreneurs (41%), and social service workers (43%).

Only about 29% of the 32,162 American professionals surveyed plan to ask their bosses for a pay bump in the coming months, LinkedIn said.

Accounting • Firm Management • Payroll

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us