

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

most promotions this year.

Jason Bramwell • Dec. 08, 2022

Question for those of you who work in public accounting: Did you get a promotion this year? If you did, you were not alone. According to a recent analysis by LinkedIn, professional services, which includes public accounting, was among the five industries that gave out the most promotions in 2022:

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us

2. Professional Services
3. Financial Services
4. Utilities
5. Manufacturing

Industries with the lowest promotion rates this year

1. Government Administration
2. Education
3. Hospitals and Health Care
4. Consumer Services
5. Hospitality

Source: LinkedIn Economic Graph

Note: Promotions from unpaid and training roles into higher-level jobs, as well as promotions from C-suite and partner titles to "owner" are excluded.

“Promotions don’t happen overnight,” said organizational behavior scholar Ruchi Sinha. “It can sometimes take months to build a case around why you deserve one. So plan to have an initial conversation with your manager six to nine months before you want to get promoted.”

The findings are based on an analysis of more than 140 million active LinkedIn profiles in the United States, focusing on job changes this year.

Hello. It looks like you're using an ad blocker that may prevent our website from working properly. To receive the best experience possible, please make sure any blockers are switched off and refresh the page.

If you have any questions or need help you can email us